The General

"Of course you would," said the detective. Then he rose and wished Leicester, "good day," left the room.

The lad, at the sound of Leicester's voice, turned pale and trembled, but said nothing.

"Don't be frightened, Jamie," said the master, "you slowly lay me removed the vest and beard."

Jamie uttered a cry of joy, which rapidly changed to fear.

"I am safe," he cried, stretching out his hand in an agony of terror, "put them on again, and fly! Fly! I am known, I am in danger! All I know is all known beside me! Oh, fly, for heaven's sake!"

"James, save Leicester," he said, "I am safe."

"What did you do—the—murder?" Oh, I know you didn't mean it, but they'll make me pay for it, you fool, oh!"

And he wrung his hands. "Why didn't I throw it away? What didn't I say?"

"Buy it, what?" asked Leicester, jangled.

The lad rubbed his hand and laid a trembling hand upon his arm.

"Master Leicester! I've got it! I found it on the cliff, among the bushes, just off, away, sir, fly, for heaven's sake!"

"Hush, my poor lad," said Leicester, who was going excited himself.

The lad put his hand and put his lips to Leicester's ear.

Leicester stared and the hot blood rushed up into his face.

"The moment you're past, and then in a low, constrained voice which trembled a little, he said:

"You found the knife, did you?"

"I did, and I kept it."

"Yes, forgive me, Master Leicester. I had to drive it in, I tried to bury it, but I couldn't; I then had to leave it where it would be found and that—that—it would tell against you!"

"I'm sorry, Master Leicester. You are a good lad, Jamie, a faithful lad. And where is the knife?"

"Up stairs," whispered the lad. "Up stairs, I took it with me. I am safe."

"All," said Leicester, "the words made the strange conduct of the lad quite clear. "We are safe," he said.

"I'm sorry, Master Leicester. You are a good lad, Jamie, a faithful lad. And where is the knife?"

"It's up my sleeve," he whispered. "Shut your eyes, Master Leicester. You have no look at the hideous thing that is in your sleeve, then throw it out to sea! Oh! it is a horrid, horrid thing!"

"I am safe," he said, "I am safe."

"All right, Jamie, don't be frightened. This is a friend."

"Is it your knife?" said Mr. Dockett.

"Let me see," said Leicester, then as he looked at it he sprang to his feet.

"It's all right, Jamie, don't be frightened. There is a bullet hole in it with a shout of fury. "His air has come to him! Nemesis is on his track."

"Whose bullet?" asked the detective.

"Howard Marpoin's," replied Leicester.

At that moment the door opened and Stumpy entered.

He had heard every word, and as he paused on the threshold, muttered to himself: "Jewelers' things are working round here for the general."

CHAPTER XXI

Captain Howard Marpoin was working fast toward a completion of his plans; but others were working faster, and filled the city with their noise. He made his way to Mr. Dockett. That report contained enough of information to surprise one more in the village of Derry. Captain Howard Marpoin's money lodges he merely raised his eyebrows and muttered.

"I am safe," he said, "I am safe; a rare pity to interfere with him."

He had heard every word, and as he paused on the threshold, muttered to himself: "Jewelers' things are working round here for the general."

SOCIETY NOT A SIN.

The annual Lenten pastoral of Bishop Clark which was read in all the churches in the Niagara Diocese last Sunday "was a document that could be read with much profit, not only by those in communion with the Church of England but by others. Province is not a sin." That is to say, people can meet and associate with their friends and relatives, have their pleasures and amusements, and yet be living in accordance with the precepts of the Church and in accordance with the word of God, so long as these things are not unlawful in the sight of God. A wise Providence has endowed man with a capacity for enjoyment. It has so constituted him that if he is to remain in poverty, he will be less likely to sin. But his body and his mind demand opportunities for social intercourse and amusement. But, as the Bishop epigrammatically says, society is full of temptations to sin. There is the temptation to make pleasure the object of life; there is the temptation to indulge in sinful pleasure, and there is the temptation to sin. Even though it should be for the hurt of others. These are all real temptations—and temptations that heat and often overcome even members of the Church. These the Bishop would guard his flock from. The Lenten season is a time for reflection; for introspection and a general withdrawing from worldly frivolities. Members of the Church are expected to deny themselves much of the worldly pleasures and to concentrate their thoughts on divine things.

Thus forty days in the wilderness, as it were, should prove a tonic for both mind and body and allow a man or a woman to take an inventory of his or her life. They can commute as to the tendency of their lives, and see if they accord with the divine purpose. If this life is merely a place of pleasure, then it is a sin. The eternal life, and if we are expected to live in this life to prepare for the future life, the question should present itself to all of us: What preparation am I making? In the conduct of my business or household affairs or in my daily round of pleasures am I making any provision for the future? We are busy here and there with little things, while the real things are being neglected.

Now, the Bishop's pastoral is a call to, for a season, give less thought to common everyday life affairs, and get closer to the spiritual life. Coming down to specific sins, he asks: Is there any neighbor against whom you entertain unkind feelings? Are there persons in your household made miserable by your self-will or hardness? Are there two questions which should give us pause? It has been said that the real person is only known in the home, and that no king is great to his valet. That is to say, that we show ourselves in our true colors in the home. We may be polite and obliging and all that sort of thing among strangers or outside the home. But the real test is what a person does at home. Upon this depend mostly the happiness of the people. It is the little faults that do the mischief. We can all, as a rule, act right in great emergencies. It is the daily round of trivial things that try men's souls and show what stuff they are made of. If the Bishop's pastoral can influence for good his hearers in the doing of the little things of life it will have accomplished what may prove of the greatest blessing to many lives.

A QUESTION OF SEATS.

As Canada increases in population the three Maritime Provinces lose seats in the Dominion Parliament. The pending redistribution of seats has brought the state of affairs into sharp focus. Prince Edward Island particularly is dissatisfied, with present conditions, but Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have made appeal against this loss of representation as well as has the Island Province. The memorandum issued shows that Nova Scotia's original number of representatives, at Confederation was 10. After the census of 1881 it rose to 21; after the census of 1891 it fell to 20; after the census of 1901 it dropped to 18, and after the 1911 census it fell to 16. For New Brunswick the figures were respectively 15, 16, 14, 13 and 11. Prince Edward Island figures were 8, 8, 5 and 3. It is pointed out that there is a possibility of Prince Edward Island's representatives being reduced to one member, and there is a further possibility that at some not far distant date it may have no representatives at all. Quebec has a fixed representation of sixty-five. It cannot be more and it cannot be less. But all the other Provinces' representatives hinges on Quebec's popularity. As Quebec increases in population, so its representation increases. If its population divided by 65 gives a certain unit that unit will increase as population increases, and it may increase until the one unit is larger than the whole population of Prince Edward Island.

The Islanders argue and give fair evidence of their contention that the original intention was that its representation should never be fewer than five. The Islanders also argue that they should have more representatives than the Maritime Colonies. Representation by population is a good Liberal rule, but there are other matters that should be taken into consideration, and the Maritime Province's position shows that.

THE DOMINION MILLERS.

The Times sympathizes with the Dominion millers and those associated with them in their efforts to break up the shipping combine and reduce freight rates, although it questions the propriety of using the means they suggest for the accomplishment of their object. For the Government to own and operate a line of Atlantic steamers in competition with private shipping would be an impossible task, the eventual result of which would be difficult to forecast.

The other proposal that the Government should subsidize a line of steamers to the extent of $5,000,000 would be preferable. But as we have said before, we believe the same end could be obtained by placing the shipping interests under the Dominion Tariff Commission or some other commission, and then let the market takes and we imagine that a way could be found to regulate the ocean rates even if the vessels are owned in Britain.

With the request of the millers that the duty on Canadian wheat and flour should be maintained, we, however, have no sympathy. The farmers of three provinces have been fighting socialistic forces for a few years back, and it is a brave thing for a man to invite bankruptcy rather than to give up his farm. The time has come to do something to help him, and we trust the Government will do its best to assist him.

The Ontario Alliance has declared in favor of Bowell's abolition of the policy. Now, will the members vote as they pray?

The new Government House at Toronto will cost $87,200,000, without the furnishings. That makes the high cost of living all the higher.

The Ontario Government proposes to spend nearly $12,000,000 the coming year. That is just about double what Mr. W. Ross' Government spent in year.

Hanging as a punishment for murder will cease as soon as juries refuse to convict. At present the last thing a jury wants to do is to send a man to the gallows.

No one seems to have thought of remarking that the Mexican murderer was a villain.—Toronto, March 1, and 2.

We made that remark early in the week.

The BOURASSA IDEA.

From the published reports of Mr. Bourassa's address at the annual dinner of the Literary Society of McMaster University, Toronto, yesterday, it is somewhat difficult to get his exact point of view on the Nationalist idea of the position Canada ought to hold towards Great Britain and the Empire, Canada, no doubt, stands in an anomalous position to-day as to its place in the Empire. The Imperialists are in a minority, and the Canadian specially and for the whole Empire generally, and the electors of Britain make and unmake its Imperial Parliament, while the elector in the overseas Dominions have no say in the matter.

Canada is responsible for the actions of the British Parliament, but it has no check upon it, no matter how injurious those may be to the Canadian people.

It is within its power to do what it can to oppose its conduct, but so far we understand and appreciate Mr. Bourassa's attitude on the question. In one report, it is said that he preached the doctrine of an equal share in power and an equal share in responsibility, which would mean an equal share in taxation, but if he is in so much share in the responsibility of the Canadian people, then he must share in the representation of the Canadian people.

He is also reported to have said: "This does not mean secession from the Empire, but free association between its component parts." Canada must either be in or out of the Empire. If she is in she must share in the responsibilities, and if she is outside of the Empire, the free association it would have with the rest of the Empire is estimated to be no more than any other country could have. Canada has got to be one thing or the other. If it cannot remain in the Empire without being in the doing of the little things of life it will have accomplished what may prove of the greatest blessing to many lives.

THE PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

As Canada increases in population the three Maritime Provinces lose seats in the Dominion Parliament. The pending redistribution of seats has brought the state of affairs into sharp focus. After the census of 1881 it rose to 21; after the census of 1891 it fell to 20; after the census of 1901 it dropped to 18, and after the 1911 census it fell to 16. For New Brunswick the figures were respectively 15, 16, 14, 13 and 11. Prince Edward Island figures were 8, 8, 5 and 3. It is pointed out that there is a possibility of Prince Edward Island's representatives being reduced to one member, and there is a further possibility that at some not far distant date it may have no representatives at

WOMEN'S LIBERAL CLUB.

As a strong advocate of women's "rights" the Times is pleased to know that there is every prospect of Hamilton having in the near future, a Women's Liberal Club established in Hamilton, to carry on the work in nearly all the activities of life. She has always taken a prominent and active part in church and charitable work, and of late she has been making her influence felt in social and other circles. Individually she has forced her way into many of the affairs of the city, which are entirely closed to her, and which she has been instrumental in getting half of the population. The economic side of life, with its effect upon the home, has pressed upon her the necessity of doing something to counteract the evils that affect the home life. The high cost of living, education, health, police and other services, all have had their effect on the family life, and she finds that the best way that she can work for their amelioration is through public means. Hence we have the organization of various Women's Clubs, latterly the Women's Liberal Clubs, the latterly the Women's Liberal Clubs.

The Islanders argue and give fair evidence of their contention that the original intention was that its representation should never be fewer than five. The Islanders also argue that they should have more representatives than the Maritime Colonies.

Representation by population is a good Liberal rule, but there are other matters that should be taken into consideration, and the Maritime Province's position shows that.

THE DOMINION MILLERS.

The Times sympathizes with the Dominion millers and those associated with them in their efforts to break up the shipping combine and reduce freight rates, although it questions the propriety of using the means they suggest for the accomplishment of their object. For the Government to own and operate a line of Atlantic steamers in competition with private shipping would be an impossible task, the eventual result of which would be difficult to forecast.

The other proposal that the Government should subsidize a line of steamers to the extent of $5,000,000 would be preferable.

But as we have said before, we believe the same end could be obtained by placing the shipping interests under the Dominion Tariff Commission or some other commission.

SHAKESPEARE NIGHT

Annual Meeting a Highly Successful One.

Yesterday afternoon the annual convention of the Hamilton Teachers' Institute was brought to a close by the election of officers for the balance of the year. The following were elected unanimously: President, R. J. Hill; vice-president, E. M. Morrison; secretary-treasurer, Miss Kate McLachlan. The executive to consist of Miss McLachlan, Miss McDonald, Miss Beanting, Miss Dill, Miss Edwards, Miss Kerr. The physical training committee will consist of Mr. James Gill, Mr. W. H. Ballard, Sergeant Major Witham, Sergeant Major McIntosh, Misses E. Shepherd, H. Savage, J. Wood, D. Dingwall and M. R. Robinson.

A motion was made and carried that the Hamilton Teachers' Institute endorse the movement known as the "Hands Across the Sea," and urge upon the educational authorities the main principle of the movement.

Mr. Kerr made a motion that delegates be sent to the April meeting of the Ontario Educational Association, it being decided that the local teachers be supplied with a magazine known as the "School" for a period of six months, those who have subscribed having their time extended for the period of time.

The chairman of the committee that had been formed to look into the question of having the fees reduced, and this carried unanimously, as did also one to the effect that the secretary communicate with the other Institutes of the Ontario Association, forwarding the recommendation of the meeting.

Mr. Gill made a motion that the great and the small are their objects of bounty. The little and large are held by one hand. The power that controls is the light that is in us. All life is a unit and joined by one hand.

As harmony comes through the mind of the master, The din of the ages into music shall turn.

The frictions of earth that now make such havoc Shall return to the sun and make fast to burn.

"All things are of God." Let us cease from our doubting. The wisdom that rules in confusion and crime, Out of all comes the glory that man shall inherit. In the order of nature the Gods know no time.

Like the child in its cot, we fret in our fury,

We fear and we fume and we cry in the night.

The morning will break and the mist will all vanish,

The Maker of all things hath wisdom and might.

Let us turn in our night to the task that is near us, Let us work with a will, we are part of the power;

Let us join and uplift our fellows around us,

Forgetting our sorrows in the task of the hour.

OUR DUTY

(By William Strong)

In the joy of the morning fair springtime is speaking, In the breath of the sunbeam is the promise of God, In the air that enwrap is the true resurrection.

The mind of the master scatter blessings abroad.

The great and the small are their objects of bounty.

The little and large are held by one hand.

The power that controls is the light that is in us.

All life is a unit and joined by one hand:

As harmony comes through the mind of the master,

The din of the ages into music shall turn.

The frictions of earth that now make such havoc Shall return to the sun and make fast to burn.

"All things are of God." Let us cease from our doubting. The wisdom that rules in confusion and crime, Out of all comes the glory that man shall inherit. In the order of nature the Gods know no time.

Let us turn in our night to the task that is near us, Let us work with a will, we are part of the power;

Forgetting our sorrows in the task of the hour.

SHORT COAT SUITS FOR SPRING

Red and Blue Velvet and Cloth

The Newest Effect in Cloth Ripples

All women who inquire about the modes in suits for spring will be given a short answer. The coats are to be short. And in spite of the fact that the general outline of the figure will be changed by this device, the effect is beautiful. Some have exalted this, others minimized the result; the bustle and the petticoat skirt must have room to show their new lines; others explain this style by smilingly supposing that it is a return to the 1880's.

The newest effect in ripples is shown on the suit of green cloth. The jacket is rounded off at the front and three ripples edge the bottom. Sleeves have ripples for cuffs. The skirt has three ripples, giving just the right fullness that give the triple-skirt effect that is being emphasized for spring. A waistcoat of brocade is buttoned in front under velvet buttons. Around the waist line is a belt of velvet.

Blue velvet and red broadcloth are combined in the suit that has a double coat with a rounded edge. The skirt is three-quarter length and edges with bands of cloth at the front under four buttons. Sleeves are three-quarter length and edges with bands of cloth. The skirt is draped slightly at the back and has a row of buttons down the center.

In peasant line there is a whipcord model that spells masculinity. A straight line at the fastened end and two different lines at the back, one dipping down and the other dipping down to the waist. There are dropped shoulder lines, and a narrow belt has an odd tab at the front. A collar of fine linen trim the top of the coat and carries out the white piping which runs along the seams.

Two views of the chiffon velvet model are given. Here there is shown a new back of a coat. It suggests the idea of other "broken" coats, where the fullness without bulk, becomes integral to all figures are here. The coat has a back that is not fitted and has the ripples heightened with a tassel of beads. Two lines of braid are drawn across the back, the top line meeting edges the low line and the collar. Short sleeves are excellent for showing the full undershoulder. On the skirt there are three tiers that dip down at the back in parallel lines. The wide edge of the skirt is draped slightly at the side is the only trimming. In the front view is shown a belt of velvet with a row of buttons. This will have a great vogue this spring. The points are fastened like a bow tie. The belt is gathered and gathered to the color line up from the skirt to the jacket. At one side the second tier of the drop falls to the floor. The braid under the hem is maintained by the continuation of the braid across the front.

Keep these facts in mind when you order your spring suit.

HAMILTON, THE INDUSTRIAL CENTRE OF CANADA, A GOOD CITY TO LIVE IN

STAND SOLID
WITH ROWELLRousing Scene at Dominion
Alliance Yesterday.

FAR IN ADVANCE

Is Liberal Leader, of sept. Times.

Toronto, Feb. 28.—That this convention halls with pleasure the adoption by the Liberal party, under the leadership of Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., of a policy aiming at the immediate abolition of the bar-room, the treating system and drinking clubs, and further restrictions and regulations for remedying the evils resulting from the liquor traffic—a policy deserving the hearty support of all.

Amid a scene unprecedented for enthusiasm in the history of the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance, the entire convention in Massey Hall yesterday, with the exception of five delegates, rose to their feet at the instigation of Mr. Joseph Gibson and cheered again and again when the foregoing motion was passed. There was a keen discussion over a motion moved by Mr. G. B. Gilmour of Chatham to have the words, "the Liberal Party under the leadership of Mr. Rowell," struck out, the speaker declaring that the alliance of the temperance party with any political party meant the putting back of the hands of the clock.

GOVERNMENTS MADE OF POLITI-CIALS.

"I have nothing to say about Mr. Rowell. He has not got the Liberal party behind him. I am glad to take into consideration two or three of our Governments are made up of politicians and politicians are human beings. The last government was a failure. The office of the alliance shows that the cause of temperance never made a real or fair start. That does not seem largely to the growth of the temperance sentiment. It is true; but at the same time it is also true that the last government that people are becoming heartier owing to the fact that they are getting a square deal. (Laughter and cheering.) I am sympathetic with Mr. Rowell in forming an alliance with a party that is not behind him we will bring about a state of affairs that our enemies are longing for."

CHERISHED FOR MR. ROWELL.

Mr. Joseph Gibson, in his characteristic fashion, poured out eloquently upon the worth of Mr. Rowell in the cause of temperance.

"If you cannot believe Mr. Rowell you cannot believe me," he said. "If I can't believe him, then I don't know what is in myself. Take as I am, I am bound to express my gratitude to that man."

A storm of cheers broke out at the statement of Mr. Gibson, and the quite evident that the sympathy of the audience was with the motion. Mr. Munro of Toronto declared that Mr. Rowell was twenty years in advance of his time. Mr. J. H. Oliver of Toronto said that the liquor interests were not afraid to go into politics, "but we are not afraid to go into politics because we can get it from some political party. If the political leader declares that he is for us, then we are bound to look after his party. I believe Mr. Rowell has lived up to his promises. Why should we worry now because a party has come along? I am ready to nail my colors to the mast!"

NEVER WAS SUCH A LEADER.

Mr. Edward Fielding of Toronto, in a strong, ringing speech, and stated that he had no desire to find such a leader as Mr. Rowell. He was sacrificed financially to carry on this work, and he had given his life. "My life, my political life, is in this thing or it goes out." (Loud cheers.) Mr. S. Spence ended by saying that the motion meant that temperance people were to sink their differences and give their strength to one cause. He had paid to the Conservative Government for the work they had done.

CONDONE THREE-FIFTHS CLAUSE.

The condemnation of the three-fifths clause was loud and strong in the following resolution, which carried with enthusiasm:

"Whereas there is a strong sentiment in the province against the three-fifths clause; and whereas a local option law carried by a majority of the electors, and as amended, and as different to repeat as when carried by a three-fifths vote; and whereas now conditions have been created which make the carrying into effect the enactment of the three-fifths clause by the coming in of many foreigners and others who have come into the province, and who do not understand that the motion meant that temperance people were to sink their differences and give their strength to one cause."

"Let's have a standing vote," said Mr. Edward Fielding, and the audience rose. "We're there only sitting down," he quipped. "Get up, get up, he said, and the audience followed his example, and the person addressed rose. "No person in favor of the three-fifths clause was seen sitting, with a note of relief on his face."

POLITICAL ACTION OUTLINED.

The report of the Committee on Political Action was carried wholesale. It included the platform of the alliance, namely: "The total suppression of the traffic in intoxicating liquors, and the power to do this by the City of the Ontario Legislature to enact legislation prohibiting the liquor traffic as far as within the power of Provincial legislation." The resolution, drawn as members of the Legislature of men who are in sympathy with the temperance movement, and who believe that it at all times is in the best interest of the public welfare, progress will be made by political leaders until the suppression of liquor shops as well as bars is enacted in a bill of rights upon which the Christian element of Ontario will be appealed to for support; gratification at the amendments made by the Legislature will be the better enforcement of local option.

The Executive Committee was instructed to draw up a circular letter of instructions for the guidance of electors and insure the presence of candidates at all by-elections in the cause of temperance.

FOR A DRY DOMINION.

A motion prepared by Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore, and seconded by Alf. P. McNeil, was to the effect that the campaign had arrived when definite campaigns should be inaugurated with the object of securing from the Parliament of Canada the total禁酒法。禁酒法。禁酒法。

That the unemployed married women who are otherwise qualified should be removed. A copy of the resolution will be sent to the press.

An able address was given by Conductor Simpson upon the "Worker and Proletarian." The speaker was enlightened. He was everywhere becoming more sober, and the good effects this must inevitably follow.

Rev. E. W. Halpin gave an address upon "A Pledge-signing Day," setting forth the aims of the Ontario branch of the alliance in conjunction with other societies, in obtaining 100,000 pledges by October, 1915. As a result of the pledge, the executive was authorized to continue the executive to assist in the campaign.

Mr. Theron Gibson, the retiring treasurer of the Ontario branch, with address in album form and a magnificent writing desk by his friend, the chairman, was presented to the audience with which they will deal, and from the United States will come Mr. Charles C. Chapman, with the Section of New York, who will deliver as his address a speech on "Capturing the Labor Movement" and the "Role of the Canadian Worker Among Workingmen."

Time Not Yet Arrived To Make Big Reductions In Naval Expenditure

"That Would Be Staking Too Much on a Gambling Chance," Said Sir Edward Grey Who Added That Forces Making for Increases Were Beyond Control

Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, who was the guest of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, gave an address on the question of armaments. He said: I have not an important pronouncement to make on the subject of armaments. I am not going to say that we are to have a reduction in the Navy Estimates of this year. I could, of course, tell you several things about them. I could assure you that they will be such as will adequately safeguard the interests of this country; on the other hand, that they will not be such as to support any aggressive policy, and many other commonplace of that kind which you may take as valid.

On the other hand, I do not know that I have anything comforting to say about the expenditure on armaments. I can, of course, tell you that I cannot confirm quite the contrary sensational stories which have been about that the Cabinet is likely to find itself unable to agree upon the Navy Estimates for this year. I can assure you that this is a comforting statement to everybody. There will be those who will assume that the Cabinet is about to agree over Navy Estimates so excessive as to be "bloat ed." That is the word. There will be others who will assume that the Cabinet is about to agree upon Navy Estimates which will be so moderate as to be "shabby." Neither of these classes will be comforted. And then there are those who find life less interesting and its prospects less attractive if they find the Cabinet is in agreement than when they think it is going to differ.

I can, of course, enlarge on an eloquent denunciation of the waste of excessive expenditure on armaments. I have had a new slogan ever since ever came in my life in the House of Commons on that subject, but if I did that now we should not find ourselves very much further forward to-morrow morning. I might also attempt to approach eloquence in dilating upon the importance of maintaining the Navy as sufficient strength to discharge our responsibilities in any and every country, but is anyone the better off next morning for that? I would like instead to apologete a little bit the causes of that great expenditure.

Causes of Expenditure

It is really a cosmopolitan matter, and that is the serious side. It is not a British matter alone, but of European interest. It is the cumulative effect of the expansion of the countries in Europe other than the prospects of Europe. I think the five great nations of Europe—that is the five great Continental nations—have increased by eighty millions in their military expenditure and thirty-five millions in their naval expenditure. It is no relief that we are bound to look at it as a naval question, but we must look at it in full. It is of vital interest to Europe to have its naval armament and increase on its military expenditure. The effect is the same in regard to one as in regard to the other. In regard even to military expenditure, we have increased in recent years. In regard to the naval we have increased, and enormously increased, and it was imposed, with all this expense given on to Britain, to both military and naval matters, that we should remain entirely free from increase. Of course, it stands to reason with us that it should take place on the Navy, which stands to us as the army does to continental nations.

One thing about the situation is this, that whilst any large increase in the building program of the navy in this group has a stimulating effect upon the expenditure in other countries it does not follow that a slackening in the expenditure in one country produces a diminution in expenditure of others.

A Race of the Powers

There seems to be a sort of idea abroad that this is a race with some prize to be won at the end of it. It is a most misleading idea, but supporting it exists consciously or unconsciously it does not follow. If there is such an idea—it does not follow that if the leading horse slackened off, and that slackening was due to exhaustion—it does not follow that the part of others. It might be argued that the world does not do what it seems obvious to us it ought to do, that it is in our fault that they are not trying to do it.

Preservation of Peace

The greatest object you desire in foreign politics is that we should keep the country in peace (cheers), and that not from any poorness of spirit on our part, as if we were so shocked by the idea of war that we could not understand what could be contemplated. We are, however, so constituted that because we are possessed by a sense of the waste of war and the feeling that to that is mainly responsible for the leading horse slackened off, and that slackening was due to exhaustion—it does not follow that the part of others. It might be argued that the world does not do what it seems obvious to us it ought to do, that it is in our fault that they are not trying to do it.

DANGEROUS BLONDES

Judge and Lawyer's Scathing Attack on Fair-haired Women

Fair-haired women have been denounced by Mr. Justice Giesegrich, of the Supreme Court, in an interview with a reporter. "Danger! Beware!" should be carried on the breast and shoulders of a blonde, says a sandwich-board display his advertisement to a starting-point in New York, added Mr. Herman L. Roth, a leading lawyer, subsequently expressed himself as in thorough agreement with the judge's denunciation of fair-haired women.

"Ninety out of every hundred respondents in divorce cases are blonde," Mr. Roth said. "Blondes love no one well but themselves. Blondes invite flirtation and insult. Blondes bear the trade name of the coquette."

"They say, in effect, 'Catch me! I am easily caught.' A blonde attracts instant attention because she bears the trade mark of the flirt. Her golden hair is a challenge. She is the trade maker of the world."

Marriage Hint
In its annual report to the congregation of the First Presbyterian Church the secretary said that the one marriage had been solemnized during the year, and he hoped the young man would see that the ceremony did not become obsolete.

Gassy Death at Sea
When the body of a popular Gael named Doyle, who died on the voyage from America, reached Ballymally, County Cork, it was met by a large committee of friends, including a body of Gaels, who marched in procession to the cemetery. He wrote home prior to starting from America, but on nearing the Irish coast he died.

Returning From a Wake
Mary McGonigal, aged seventy, Donegal, was returning at a late hour with her daughter from the wake of a relative at Ballyshannon. It was met by a large committee of friends, including a body of Gaels, who marched in procession to the cemetery. He wrote home prior to starting from America, but on nearing the Irish coast he died.

His wife was fond of lying in bed in the morning reading

New Light on Burns

Some new ideas about Robert Burns are brought out in Glasgow children's books. "Burns' Birthplace" (Price 2s.)
is 155 years old on Sunday, 25th March, 1914. "He had a wife called Highland Mary, who died just when they were to be married." When Burns died he gave a shawl to Highland Mary, from which she took the fiver and died."

Baby Suffocated by a Dog

An unusual occurrence at Huntly, Aberdeenshire, is the birth of William Roy, baker, being suffocated in his cradle by a tiny Pomeranian.
When Mr. Roy went to work in the early morning the child was sleeping peacefully, but when he returned to breakfast he found the child dead.
The dog having jumped into the cradle and laid on the face of the infant.

Giant Dog Dies

At Inverness a mother and child named Mackenzie were rescued from drowning in the River Ness. The child first fell into the water, and the mother immediately plunged in after it, both being carried away.
Amidst great excitement two men,
James Macmillan and John Mac-Donald, swam out to mid-stream and brought them ashore in an exhausted condition.

Malingering Sentenced

Malingering under the National Insurance Act was alleged at Devon Assizes, where Alfred Hollowell, twenty-nine, wheelchair, pleaded guilty to concealing sums of money by means of a forged certificate of invalidity, a "doctor" a certificate stating that he was suffering from asthma, and received $2.50 a week, although in work at the time and earning money. The doctor's signature was forged by prisoner.
Sentence of six months' hard labor was passed.

WORLD'S WONDER RAILROAD LACKS BUT ONE LINK FROM CAPE TO CAIRO IN AFRICA

Another link to the project of the "Cape to Cairo" all-sea route was completed when trains were run to Bunkans, 2,632 miles north.

But one strip, the 655 miles between Stanleyville and Mahagi, in the heart of the Sudan, remains to be completed and made possible the traversing of the continent, from north to south by train and ship.

The distance from Cape Town to Cairo is 8,944 miles. South from Cairo the line is completed to Kosti, where trains connect with steamers to Port Sudan, 1,000 miles by water. Then comes the break in the line, the 652 miles of jungle still to be pierced by the iron rails.

When this is completed, and it is expected that it will be in two years, the traveler who embarks at Cape Town will travel 4,979 miles by train and 1,086 miles by steamer to reach Cairo.

Every mile of the road has been a battle. Hostility of natives at the beginning necessitated the bringing of an army to guard the engineers and workmen. When the benefits of the road turned the hostility to enthusiasm, there were still the dangers from disease, the terrible heat of the equator, the wild animals of the jungle.

Now, 77 miles strip to Stanleyville, where the equator is crossed, is estimated to have cost a man for every yard of construction.

Fighting tigers and lions has been as important as the building of bridges. At Gwelo a fullgrown lion blocked work trains for a day. Great palliades were built at each camp to guard the workmen.

Geophagia have torn up telegraph poles and carried away rails.

The worst enemy has been the white ants of the Congo, whose hills range from 20 to 60 feet high. These ants destroy anything that iron and steel, and it has been necessary to cover all telegraph poles with sheeting and to use steel cross ties.

Judge and Lawyers

Mr. Justice Scrutton, delivering judgment at Gloucester in a case in which $160 was in dispute, said it would have been better for either party to have paid the money originally in dispute and have done with the lawyers. "They will be lucky if they get out of it under $1,500 each," he added. "If ever there is a case which the plaintiff has reason to wish he had never been born and the defendant to wish he were dead this is it."

MADMAN IN A HAYLOFT

Defoe Police and Fire Brigade For Hours and Sets Fire to House

For four hours a well known Reading baker, who, apparently, had suddenly lost his reason, resided in a force of civil police, and firemen at bay, and was only captured after the house had been directed upon him.

The man's name was Porock. He was in a public house, and suddenly to the consternation of the occupier and customers, began smashing everything he could lay his hands upon.
The police summoned, and a constable, the man darted out of the house, and up a ladder to a hayloft where, taking possession of a pronged fork, he stood at the entrance to the loft, and threatened to kill anyone who dared approach him.

After a time the man closed the opening of the floor of the loft, and was near death before he was through the roof, from which position it is surmised, he thought he might be attacked, finding himself unmolested, he returned to the loft, and shortly afterwards it was seen that he had fled the place.

The fire brigade were summoned when the alarm arrived the fire was subdued. A quantity of water was however, directed on the house, and eventually the police and members of the brigade forced an entry, and, after a struggle succeeded in securing the man who had been in the loft
for about four hours.

Stained Glass

One of the last windows in stained glass made for many years is now being completed as a memorial to King Edward at Home. The dimensions are 40 feet in length by a width of 26 feet, and this huge expanse of beautiful glass is to be the west window of the parish church at which King Edward worshipped when he stayed in the neighborhood.

MR. BIRRELL'S GHOST STORY

Haunted Since Beyhood by Odd Visions of Isaac Newton

Mr. Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, astonished the company at the Bristol Press Fund dinner by relating a unique ghost story, which he introduced in his response to the toast of "Literature and Journalism." In referring to a recent speech by Dr.
Silvana Thompson on the importance of science, the right hon. gentleman said: "I don't know, my Lord Mayor, whether you ever have had dreams,
but I have been haunted ever since
I was a boy by the spectre of Isaac Newton. I become more and more involved, and, at last, the unhappy ghost,
throwing up his hands, leaves me with dismay."

"That dream constantly comes to me. The only difference is that the ghost is not as bad as it used to be.
I have seen him now as he was when I first saw him, but he is not as bad as he used to be."

"Oh, that old ignoramus," and departs.

THE THEATRES

AND THOSE IN THE FOOTLIGHT GLOW

Canon James Owen Hannay, the well-known author whose latest book, "General Jack," Regals the centre of attraction in modern drama in the United States, is making a strong impression on the public mind between the clergy and the theatrical profession, particularly in the relation of both to the dramatic offerings of the day. He says:

"I think that while, perhaps, there is some basis for the religious preoccupation of the actors, there may be a good deal of reason for it in some plays, that ought not to be extended to all plays. I see no reason for an approach or a closer relationship between the Church and the stage; I look forward to it as being of great benefit to both; good for the church and good for the stage. Not for one single moment would I venture to say that the clergy should act in any way at all concern of the drama. I hate all censor, and I think if there is a cause for censoring a play, any other it would be a classical censor. The clergy are a class; less than anything else in the community, and I should look forward to nothing other than the church exercising any kind of censorship over the drama. Not when I speak of the increasing, friendly relationship between the two, I venture for a moment to suggest that sermons should be put on the stage. I am not for Mr. Hannay's idea that sermons, or a kind of sermon, were put on the stage in the middle ages as miracles. Plays, above all, are a means of salvation; that revised, I do not know of many, nor have I seen very many, but when I do, I shall be glad to see it. It is one that is intolerably dull. And that is really the case if the business of these on the stage should be treated as a kind of salvation for the churchmen and the actors can approach each other more closely in a spirit of mutual personal salvation between the members. There is in England a society called the Actors' Union, and a similar organization exists in America, which has a branch of the Actors' Church Union, I am sure, that is doing a fine work. Its work I have no time to speak of now, but I suppose those details would be better left to another. I should hope that a considerable number of the clergy get into close personal touch with them; that they get on well with them, because actors and actresses are, not necessarily, or often, moral; that they are not always honest, and that; and that; this is a Bohemian entirely virtuous and right, and that one of the other hand, the actors and actresses are not always honest, and that; and the clergy and come to regard Jesus as a kind of horrid or else rather dead person. In these events we have at least potentialities of friendship in us."

EVILYN THAW AGAIN.

After hearing many witnesses, which included critics, clergymen and police men, Justice Crookshank, at Richmond, Va., has decided that he will not prohibit Evlyn Nesbit Thaw from appearing on the stage of the Academy of Music, and publicly dismissed the charge that her conduct was a "deritement to public morale." The result was that a capacity audience attended the opening night performance later in the evening.

Despite Mayor Almire's order that the appearance of Mrs. Thaw would be prohibited by management, the theatre directed Mrs. Thaw to carry out her performance of yesterday's matinee. She had to proceed to the rear of the stage, where she was arrested by Chief of Police Werner. She was paroled in the custody of her counsel.

Chief of Police Werner, when questioned, said: "I told the Ministerial Association, who passed the resolution asking that Mrs. Thaw's appearance be stopped, that there was no law to prohibit her. Her aquittal was exactly what I expected."

When arrested, Mrs. Thaw gave her age as twenty-seven, and said that she was born in Pennsylvania and was married.

BILLIE BURKE'S LONG TOUR.

Billie Burke having definitely decided ed not to go to London for a spring opening in "The Land of Promise," which is to open next week, she will postpone the English production, but will make it immediately with Irene Van Brugh as Norah, at the Duke of York's.

When Miss Burke's present Lyric Theatre season concludes in New York at the end of this month, she will go to Europe longer than ever, and may very well be the most important tour she has attempted as a star. The plot of "The Land of Promise" is based on the Canadian northland, and the tour will include British Columbia and California in her territory. The principal cities of the United States will be visited, and it is likely that while in San Francisco she will give special performances in the city, and in Los Angeles, where she has never been seen there.

Mr. Case's information was to the effect the Empire theater, at the Olympia, Philadelphia, had agreed to have her appear on its stage, but in vain; Irving was adamant in his generosity, and had his way.

ENASTH WAY OUT.

A wire was received this week by Mr. Case, of New York, from Mary Lloyd, making Mr. Case to see that the bond signed with the management of the Empire theater, I. C. Case, is renewed if necessary. Mr. Case's information was to the effect the Empire theater, at the Olympia, Philadelphia, had agreed to have her appear on its stage, but in vain; Irving was adamant in his generosity, and had his way.

The bond filed for $3,000 at the time the employee was in New York, was presented to him again, and he signed it again.

It was given to allow Alice Lloyd to play her theatrical contracts in this country, and called for her departure, also, Dillon, by the terms of her contract.

SIR JOHNSTON FORBES-ROBERTSON. — Son.

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, who is now making his farewell tour of the United States, has come to Canada, and, last—but not least—playing with his children. Still in his sixties, he is a picture of health, and, entering his painting studio while his thoughtful mother-in-law, Miss Marion, was at work, he turned to her at the bottom of a typically English garden, he probably much more interested in these than in his wife, driving with his charming wife, Gertrude Elton, than ever he was, or is, on the stage.

He has deservedly been for so many years in both England and America.

As a painter, too, Forbes-Robertson has more than once been hung in the Academy, and has lately devoted most of his leisure to paintings of the little pictures of his childhood, and driving with his charming wife, Gertrude Elton, than ever he was, or is, on the stage.

He is proud of the fact that his first bank balance was realized from his painting of the church scene in "Madame Bovary," which was hung

HARD LUCK HIRE. — The "Fox & Co. Inc." company nearly froze while struggling in the throes of the blizzard, which struck their special train, Kansas City, from Salt Lake City to Salina, the engine truck, as did the fire box. It was necessary to stop the train and build a fire under the engine. The train was stranded several hours on the Kansas prairie. The Baker headers in the Pacific Northwest, who had come to aid and the members of the company early started in addition to the express of the bitter cold. The express at Salina was unable to get water supply. It took the train five hours to make the trip from Salina to Wichita, the express having to stop at Emporia. They finally arrived in Wichita at 7:30 p.m. The whole company had to play on empty stomachs.

AN ACTOR-MURDERER.

Robert Maloney, seen on the local stage as "Willy the Wizard," a man accused of killing his wife, was missing several days ago that he was not only a murderer, but a bigamist as well. Maloney has been known as the "great jewel" answer to a charge of killing his second wife and baby. According to Maloney, his first wife died in 1908. That year he divorced her and married Odette Hartman. Maloney will plead insanity, but jail authorities say he appears to be sane.

ROSE STAHL'S APPRECIATION.

Rose Stahl, the actress, is a French girl. Some time ago she broke her leg, and was very sick with typhoid fever and recovered at Mount Hospital. To show her gratitude, the manager of the Grand will take her entire company there on the night of April 11, and every penny of the proceeds will go to the hospital. The cost of the trip personally hundreds of dollars, as it involves a long jump and off the express. She will practice in "The Unwritten Law," as seen in Hamilton a week ago.

SOUTHERN ANT-MARLOWE.

Julia Marlowe's retirement from the stage is confirmed by E. H. Sothern, according to a dispatch from London, Ont. Sothern says that he will follow his wife and wife and son, and may very well the most important tour she has attempted as a star. The plot of "The Land of Promise" is based on the Canadian northland, and the tour will include British Columbia and California in her territory. The principal cities of the United States will be visited, and it is likely that while in San Francisco she will give special performances in the city, and in Los Angeles, where she has never been seen there.

Mr. Case's information was to the effect the Empire theater, at the Olympia, Philadelphia, had agreed to have her appear on its stage, but in vain; Irving was adamant in his generosity, and had his way.

The reports about a separation of Mr. Sothern from his wife, his wife, and son, are false.

"The After House"

A mystery story by Mary Robins Rinehart, author of "When a Man Lives" and "The Man in Lower Ten," etc.

It is undoubtedly the most absorbing story published this year.

The story runs along at a very rapid pace—there is no time to get lost in it.

Plenty of mystery and fun with just enough of the more serious elements to season.

Price $1.10.

A PRECAUTION

Protection of Treasurer's Office in City Hall.

When it was found that, by entering the office of the city accountant, a stranger could walk into the treasurer's department, where often as many as $35,000 is on hand, it was decided to take the same precautions in the accountant's quarters as in those of Mr. Leckie. To-day, strict arrangements were arranged for making it impossible for outsiders to walk through that office into the treasurer's, but it was only after the Protection Committee arranged the office of the treasurer in such a manner that it was considered burglar-proof. This morning the police vacated the City Hall in favor of the new station, four blocks away.

STUNG SOMETIMES

Charity Department is Sure to Get It.

Alluding to-day to the undeserving case of charity in which a family owning considerable had "spooned" on the city for five hundred pounds of coal. Mr. G. C. Stitt, chairman of the civic relief department, pointed out that out of two hundred cases only three had been found to be "taken." We have not yet even paid back two and a half days before answering a call for help," she added. "The question is, what is the use of which is to come up now and again, but that is not the reason why the deserving should suffer. When I went down to see the people in the house, the house was full of filth, but I don't think they will seek help from the city in a hurry again."

HYDRO SALARIES

Board Discussing Subject In Private To-day.

The Hydro Commission spent this morning with the controllers in discussing in private the general lack of harmony between municipal representatives, particularly the members of the Board, and the Board and the street lighting system. It was decided to send to Toronto to engineer Gandy and his associates report their findings regarding conference to be had in regard to the matter he had on the master.

The Commissioners to-day met in private concerning the applications of employees of the Hydro Department for increases in salary, and laid the matter over.

It is not known whether Engineer Stitt will be kept on after his contract to establish the municipal power system expires next month. The idea at present is to keep him for the balance of this year.
